

I strongly feel the FCC would be doing a huge injustice to the residents of Indiana if they, in anyway, alter the preexisting Telephone Privacy law. By passing this law, the lawmakers of Indiana made staying home a pleasure again. It was not uncommon to receive four to five sales calls a day. Now we may get one in five months. Now you can spend valuable time with my family without having complete strangers interrupt and become persistent, agitated and rude after you tell them you're not interested. Please don't alter the present law.

Thank you.
